

La Recherche en
Informatique au Féminin

March 7th, 2020

9^{ème} Journée Scientifique sur la Recherche en Informatique au Féminin

Call for papers

As part of the research activities of the LIRE Laboratory of Constantine 2 University, the laboratory's women's research team organizes the 9th edition of the RIF seminary "Computer Science Research at Feminine" (Recherche en Informatique au Féminin).

RIF 2020 will be held at Constantine 2 University, in March, 07, 2020. It will act as a major forum for the presentation of innovative ideas, approaches, developments and research projects in the area of business intelligence and big learning, by research women exclusively.

It will also serve to facilitate the exchange of information between researchers to discuss the latest issues and advancement in the area of advanced computer systems that will be covered during the conference.

The topics suggested by this seminary can be discussed in term of concepts, surveys, state of the art, research, implementations, running experiments, applications and industrial case studies, they may include:

- Business Intelligence and Data Analytics
- Modern and Emerging Systems (Internet of Things, Cyber-Physical Systems, Fog Systems, Cloud Systems, etc.)
- Software Architectures, Design patterns and application frameworks
- Safety and Security of Distributed Systems
- Big Data (LOD, NoSql, Quality assessment, etc)
- Cooperative Information Systems and Semantic interoperability
- Mobile Software Engineering and Systems

On the sidelines of this scientific seminary, a round-table will be organized as a form of an academic discussion between teachers, students and researchers. The debating topic will be : How to Achieve Modern and Smart University?
